Invitation to the “Scancor Symposium on Institutional Analysis 2011”

Within the scope of the “Scancor Symposium on Institutional Analysis 2011” ten well-recognized researchers from US and European universities will visit the University of Mannheim, where they will present their current research projects based on institutional analyses and discuss new directions in organizational research with participants of the symposium. During these morning sessions, participating students and researchers are thus given the opportunity to meet and discuss with leading researchers in the field of organizational research.

With Walter Powell, Victoria Johnson, Jason-Owen Smith, Bruce Carruthers and Gili Drori from the US as well as Michael Woywode, Renate Meyer, Henning Hillmann, Giuseppe Delmestri und Georg Krücken from Europe, leading researchers from different research streams within in the field of institutional analysis have followed the invitation to present their recent research projects. Their research interests encompass institutional analysis on both the macro to the micro level while applying a wide range of qualitative and quantitative methods including methods from social network analysis.

On each day of the symposium, one US and one European researcher will give a public talk on a current research project. Students and researchers from Mannheim and other universities are cordially invited to participate in the morning sessions free of charge. Participants who register for one or more days online or using the attached form are also invited for lunch, where discussions may be continued and deepened.

Please register online (www.scancor-workshop-2011.de/registration) or using the attached form.
